

Exploring the Writing Process with Primary Source Materials

Lesson Topic: Revision

Lesson Plan Created By:

Elaine Temel

Grade Levels:

6th - 8th, High School

Primary Source:

Clare Boothe Luce's scene description of her play The Women. 1936. Manuscript/Mixed Material. <https://www.loc.gov/item/mcc.081/>.

Compelling Question:

How do writers revise their draft to improve their writing?

Supporting Question:

What revision strategies can students apply to their own writing?

Objective:

In this 50 minute lesson, students will explore Clare Booth Luce's scene description of her play The Women to better understand the revision stage of the writing process.

Standards - Common Core:

Lesson Standards 6th - 8th

CCSS.ELA-LITERACY.W.11-12.6: Use technology, including the Internet, to produce, publish, and update individual or shared writing products in response to ongoing feedback, including new arguments or information.

Lesson Activity Instructions

Whole Group Class Discussion Question: (5 - 10 minutes)

Spend a few minutes discussing the following as a class: Why is the revision step necessary in the writing process?

Provide the following link for students: <https://www.loc.gov/item/mcc.081/>. Ask: What revision strategies do you see in the first paragraph that you can name and point out?

Answers may include:

- First sentence- using a more precise word - changing “perfume” to “cosmetics”
- First sentence- eliminating unnecessary or redundant words - “perfume” was removed before the word “sale”
- First sentence- cutting down a run-on sentence, “being sold, at the, here” all cut from the first sentence

- Second sentence - general words changed to more specific words - “group” changed to “customers”
- Second sentence - verbs changed to agree with the noun - “customers consisted of” changed to “are”
- Line 9 - verb tense corrected from “were” to “are”
- Line 10 - part of speech corrected - “prohibited” changed to “prohibitively”
- Line 12 - adding descriptive detail - “eye tint” becomes “eye shadows, blue eyelash mascara, purple lipstick”
- Line 14 - using strong words - “frightful” becomes “grotesque”
- Etc.

Ask: What other revision strategies have we learned in class?

Answers may include - adding sensory details, using figurative language, naming, adding dialogue, adding inner thinking, etc.

Explore: (30 - 35 minutes)

Students will now further revise the second paragraph of this excerpt using revision strategies employed by the author and/or strategies learned in class. Provide the directions on the handout.

When students have made their revisions, share and discuss in pairs, small groups or as a whole class the changes that the students have made.

Closing Summary: (5 - 10 minutes)

Writers use a variety of strategies to revise, to make their writing even better. Students may utilize the same strategies used by published authors.

See accompanying activity handouts for students.
